State Law Overhaul Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court in striking a strong blow at capital punishment has invited the states to overhaul their laws on the death penalty to more narrowly define the crimes for which it may be imposed.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said when the high court acted Thursday that the states may wish to provide standards for juries and judges to follow in determining sentences in capital cases.

In its 5-4 decision on the final day of the current court term, the court stated that "the imposition and carrying out of the death penalty...constitutes cruel and unusual punishment" in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

But the full impact of the decision—perhaps the most momentous in a busy court term—was not clear cut. The five-member majority produced five separate opinions and failed to agree completely that capital punishment would be unconstitutional under all circumstances.

Burger expressed the opinion in a dissent that the death sentence might be permissible if strict standards were spelled out for judges or juries in imposing it.

The ruling heartened 600 condemned convicts on death rows across the nation.

The court during its flurry of issuing 37 opinions in 10 cases before closing shop until the first Monday in October also make it easier for grand juries investigating crime to question both congressmen and newsmen.

The court ruled, 6 to 3, in the case of former Sen. Daniel B. Brewster, D-Md., that a member of Congress may constitutionally be tried in court for conduct such as bribery even though what he did might relate to the legislative process.

And it rejected, 5 to 4, a claim by Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, that congressional immunity protected him and an aide from questioning by a federal grand jury about his arrangements to have the classified Pentagon Papers published by a Boston firm.

In an opinion Justice Byron White said the Constitution provides that senators and representatives "for any speech or debate in either house...shall not be questioned in any other place." White said this clause refers only to the "legislative process" and Gravel's arrangements with Beacon Press can't be included.

The issue of calling newsmen before grand juries came in a trio of cases from California, Kentucky and Massachusetts.

Journalistic interests had argued that reporters' sources would dry up and the free flow of news to the public would be curtailed if information given in confidence would not be protected.

But White said "concealment of crime and agreements to do so" are not praiseworthy and "we decline now to afford it 1st Amendment protection by denigrating the duty of a citizen, whether reporter or informer, to respond to grand jury subpoena and answer relevant questions ..."

GOV. RONALD REAGAN of California doffs his white hat as he rides his rented trail horse Lady into 9,200-foot Summit Meadow in the high Sierra, where he announced that President Nixon ordered a halt to plans to build a trans-Sierra highway in the remote Minarets Summit area because it would damage the environment. Rights For Women Rejected

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)—The Louisiana legislature refused Thurdsay to ratify a proposed constitutional amendment granting equal rights to women on the grounds that it might abolish separate restrooms and good old Southern chivalry.

Some opponents also argued the amendment was vaguely worded and might be interpreted by the courts in such a way as to outlaw any legal classification based on sex.

But the point that kept recurring in the debate was separate restrooms.

Rep. Thomas Rice of Metairie told House members: "You can rest assured that once it becomes the law of the land all it would take is one lady who's of a mind to go to a dressing room with a man, or one man who's of a mind to go to a dressing room with the ladies, to take it to court and then your daughter and mine would be faced with that."

Rep. Louis Charbonnet, who represents the French Quarter of New Orleans, said he saw nothing wrong with men and women sharing restrooms.

"You use the same bathroom in your home," he said.

The amendment would outlaw denial of legal rights on account of sex. It has been approved by 19 state legislatures. Another 19 are needed for ratification.

Black House members argued opposition to women's rights was analogous to the opposition blacks have faced in the past.

But Rep. Shady Wall of Monroe said opponents were mistaken in thinking equal rights for women would strike down the traditional codes of Chivalry.

"If the good Lord created anything better than the ladies, he kept it for himself. I'm still going to open the doors for the ladies," he said, "even if this passes."

Boy Took To Science Of Poison; Now, Life In Jail

LONDON (UPI) — Graham Young's school friends spent their money on candy and comics. He spent his on poison.

The year was 1962 and a strange obsession was taking hold of the bookish 14-year-old boy in the north London suburb of Neasden.

He spent hours in the public library poring over books on toxicology, the science of poison, and experimented on mice, caterpillars and frogs, using poisons concocted at home from chemicals he bought with his pocket money.

Then he turned to humans—an experimentation that led him first to a mental institution for poisoning his family and then, on Thursday, to life in prison for killing two of his workmates with poison.

The boy began lacing food at home with antimony, a poison similar to arsenic and used in making alloys. His father, sister and stepmother took sick.

The family doctor was mystified by the vomiting and other symptoms until Graham's chemistry teacher told him the boy was bringing poisons to school.

His father and sister recovered. His stepmother died soon after but doctors said poison was not the cause. Graham confessed all and claimed credit for his stepmother's death.

Psychiatrists at his trial said the boy was suffering from a psychopathic disorder and would try to poison someone again at the slightest opportunity. The judge committed him to 15 years in Broadmoor, a prison for the criminally insane south of London.

In February, 1971, after serving only nine years, Young was released on probation after doctors at the prison pronounced him "completely cured."

Young landed a job as a warehouseman with a camera manufacturing firm, John Hadland, Ltd., not far from his boyhood home. He told his employers nothing of his stay in Broadmoor.

His workmates knew him as a loner who drank heavily, talked about poisons—and was always eager to make tea for the staff.

Within two months of Young's arrival at the firm, Robert Egle, 60, the chief warehouseman, died. Frederick Biggs, 56, another worker, died soon after. Other members of the staff came down with the same vomiting and other symptoms that struck the two men.

Doctors were at a loss to explain the illnesses until a pathologist concluded they had been caused by thallium, a poisonous metallic element resembling lead.

Police quickly discovered Young's background and arrested him. At his home they found a diary detailing how he laced tea at the factory with the poison.

Thursday, a 12-member jury found Young, now 24, guilty of murdering the two workmen and attempting to murder two other employes.

The judge sentenced Young to life imprisonment.

Supervisor Appointed

Jack Lavin will replace William Deshier as Forest Supervisor of the Bridger National Forest in Wyoming, according to an announcement today by Regional Forester Vern Hamre of Ogden. Lavin has been Supervisor of the Shoshone National Forest, headquartered in Cody, Wyo., since 1967.

"Jack Lavin has a wide range of experience in National Forest management, including 10 years in the Intermountain Region," said Hamre. "His knowledge of the geography and people of Wyoming will be most helpful in his assignment as Supervisor of the Bridger National Forest."

Lavin started his forest Service career in 1955 on the Targhee National Forest in Idaho. He transferred to the Sawtooth National Forest in 1957. He served as District Ranger on the Sawtooth Valley Ranger District and Recreation Staff Officer on the Supervisor's staff before transferring to the Washington Office in 1965 as Assistant Director of the National "Smokey Bear" fire prevention program.

Lavin graduated from Pennsylvania State University in 1950 with a B.S. degree in forestry. From 1950 to 1952 he managed a 2,000-acre rubber plantation in West Africa. He served with the U.S. Army from 1953 to 1955.

Lavin, his wife Rosemarie, and their five children will move to Kemmerer in July.

Yachting Hero In Trouble

LONDON (UPI)—A British navy frigate and a French weather ship sped to the aid today of British yachting hero Sir Francis Chichester, who messaged a search plane Thursday "I am weak and cold."

The Royal Navy frigate Salisbury broke off maneuvers with the aircraft carrier Ark Royal and joined the weather ship France II in heading for Chichester's yacht, Gipsy Moth V.

Chichester, knighted by Queen Elizabeth in 1967 for his feat of sailing round the world singlehanded, was in trouble and heading for Brest at the tip of France's Brittany peninsula after being knocked out of the Observer Singlehanded Transatlantic Sailing Race by illness.

The Royal Air Force search plane that relayed his message today reported him off Spain's Cape Finisterre, about 400 miles southwest of Brest.

Chichester, who had recently been ill with a blood ailment which affects the bone marrow and produces anemia, twice flashed with a signal lamp: "I am weak and cold."

He also messaged: "Hope son and Anderson will meet me in Brest."

His son Giles, 25, and Chichester's long-time yachting companion, John Anderson, had said earlier they expected Chichester to sail back to Plymouth, from where he started the 3,000-mile race June 17.
