MRS. CUNNINGHAM CONFESSES

PHYSICIAN TELLS HOW EX-KLUXER TOOK GIRL AWAY

Recounts Miss Oberholtzer's Story of Mistreatment by Stephenson.

By United Press:

INDIANAPOLIS, April 15.—Details of the statement of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, which led to the indictment of D. C. Stephenson, former Klan leader, on charges of kidnaping and assaulting her were revealed today at the coroner's inquest into the girl's death by John Kingsbury, her physician. Miss Oberholtzer died yesterday from poison taken after her alleged attack.

Dr. Kingsbury said Miss Oberholtzer told him she was lured to Stephenson's palatial home here on the night of March 18 and that the telephone was torn from her hands when she realized she was trapped and attempted to telephone for help.

Then, according to her story, as related by Dr. Kingsbury, she was forced to drink liquor until she became ill and was taken on board a train for Hammond, Ind.

Brutally Maltreated.

On board the train she was brutally maltreated and assaulted by Stephenson, her story to the physician said.

Next morning while Stephenson lay asleep in a hotel at Hammond she decided to kill him with his own revolver, Kingsbury said she told him, but later she decided to take poison and end her own life.

By a ruse she got away from Stephenson in the hotel at Hammond, bought the poison and drank it, the doctor said she told him.

Stephenson and his aides in the alleged kidnaping were thrown into a panic when they learned of her action and loaded her into an automobile and started back to Indianapolis immediately without calling a physician to attend the girl, it was related in her story.

Repeatedly as the auto sped through towns in Northern Indiana, Miss Oberholtzer said she pleaded with Stephenson to stop and get a doctor to relieve her agony, Dr. Kingsbury testified, but each plea was refused.

Taken to Garage.

Arriving in Indianapolis, Miss Oberholtzer was taken to the garage at Stephenson's home and kept under guard overnight, Dr. Kingsbury said.

Throughout the night she suffered intense pain from the poison and from her injuries and again and again pleaded for help, her story related.

The next day while her parents were away from home conferring with a detective, she was carried home and tossed on a bed, according to the story.

Tore Clothes Off.

The names of Earl Klenck and Earl Gentry, indicted with Stephenson on charges of implication in the kidnaping, did not appear in Dr. Kingsbury's testimony.

He referred to several persons who, Miss Oberholtzer told him was in the case as "another man" or "two other men."

"Miss Oberholtzer told me Stephenson and one other man stayed in the compartment after she had been put on the train for Hammond," Dr. Kingsbury testified.

"The other man got into an upper berth. Stephenson pulled Miss Oberholtzer's dress over her head and tore her other clothes off, she told me.

"He put her into the lower berth, entered himself and attacked her, she said. She told me the terrible marks and bruises on her body were caused by Stephenson, chiefly by his teeth."

Competition Aids Pupils to Spell

Grades Improve as Result of News-Times Contest.

The spelling contests in the rural schools, as well as the city schools, have proved to be valuable assets and the pupils have been receiving much better grades since they have had a greater incentive to make higher marks.

Many of the world's great deeds have come from a contest of some kind, and through the spirit of competition people have been moved to perform deeds that otherwise might not have been accomplished.

Several of the city and rural schools have held their spelling matches and the pictures of the winners will appear in The News-Times in a day or so.

It's queer, but out of many long lists of big words given, including some of which the pupils hardly know the meaning, the smallest words are frequently missed. The words that are used in every-day conversation are just the ones that the pupils are evidently "too sure" about, and this seems to be the reason for their failure to know them at the critical moment.

The names of more winners in the various room contests will be published with their pictures.

Only a day or two remain in which to hold the room examinations.

FAMOUS HIPPODROME TO BE TORN DOWN

By United News:

NEW YORK, April 15.—The New York hippodrome, largest theater in the world and for twenty years the land of legend where children saw elves and fairies with their very own eyes, will be gouged out by the wreckers and replaced by an office building.

Its passing will occasion no great shock to the children now, for it ceased to be the hippodrome in its old significance some time ago and has been occupied by the Keith interests as a vaudeville house. The Keith shows will continue until October, 1926, when the present lease will expire and then the wreckers will come with their crowbars and melting torches to efface the realm in which a whole generation of American children, not only New Yorkers, saw their fancies realized in the old "hip" shows, the American equivalent, while they lasted, or London's Chirstmas pantomines.

CALLES' DAUGHTER LIKES YANKEE WAYS

By United News:

LOS ANGELES, April 15.—Three months in a California academy have done much to Americanize Alici Calles, 14-year-old daughter of Mexico's president.

Dignity of being a president's daughter rests lightly upon Alici's slim shoulders. She exhibited a flapper bob Wednesday before leaving for San Diego to resume her studies at the Academy of Our Lady of Peace, and explained that it was a mark of progress.

"My father told me to study American people thoroughly," she said. "Friends urged me to let my hair grow long, but when I asked them why they only said 'because.' So I had it cut yesterday. I am sure father will approve."

CAILLAUX LOOMS AS STRONG MAN OF NEW CABINET

French Financial Genius, Once Discredited, Called to Save France.

BY JOHN O'BRIEN
United News Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, April 15.—Paul Painleve probably will meet the chamber of deputies Thursday as premier with a cabinet minus socialist representation but with the support of that powerful party.

Transcending all other aspects of the political situation is the attitude of Joseph Caillaux, a "defeatist" during the war who was convicted of trafficking wth the enemy and exiled from Paris and other principal French cities. Caillaux can have the ministry of finance in the Painleve cabinet if he wants it. If he accepts, a new era in post-war world politics will be on the way and if Caillaux should repeat his many successes as a national financier, that new era would actually arrive with Caillaux's ascension to the control of the government as premier.

Friendly With Germany.

Caillaux's importance lies in his foreign policies, although his immediate value to France depends upon his financial genius. He believes French security, prosperity and happiness depend upon friendship with Germany—the sort of friendship that would induce each to sacrifice for the other.

As the hated Clemenceau was called to win the war when others were losing, the distrusted Caillaux may be called to win the peace which others have not been able to win. The underlying principles of world politics would alter if Caillaux should step from Painleve's cabinet to the premiership.

While Painleve was telling President Doumergue that he would form a cabinet to succeed the left government headed by Edouard Herriot, the chamber of deputies by 325 votes to 29 acted to regularize the situation of the Bank of France.

Increase Paper Money.

A bill was passed increasing the legal limit of bank advances to the government to 26,000,000,000 francs, and increasing the legal circulation of bank notes to 45,000,000,000. This regularizes the illicit issue of notes and borrowings of the Herriot government and the bill now goes to the senate for immediate action.

Socialist leaders refused Painleve's invitation to join his cabinet, but the party executive council unanimously resolved to support any government faithful to fundamental principles of the socialist program.

EBERT CONDEMNS VON HINDENBURG

Son of Former German President Deplores Militarist's Candidacy.

EDITOR'S NOTE: — Having presented the "case" for the "empire bloc," through exclusive interviews with Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, nationalist candidate for the German presidency, and Admiral Von Tripitz. International News Service today gives the other side of the German campaign—that of the left bloc—through the son of the late president, Friederich Ebert. Fritz Ebert is himself one of the most active and prominent republican leaders and one of the organizers of the reichs banner.

By FRITZ EBERT, JR.
Written Especially for I. N. S.
(Copyright, 1925, by I. N. S.)

BERLIN, April 15. — The whole world is looking eagerly to Germany. It expects the German people to prove it is worthy of living in a republic and that it has found the republican form of government the highest crown of democracy. The union of all the republicans upon the Wilhelm Marx candidate in itself signifies their tremendous victory, for which some parties—especially the social democrats — paid heavy sacrifices.

April 26 will decide between the black, red and white of the empire and the black, red and gold of the republic. The struggle between republic and monarchy will be extraordinarily hard and bitter. However, nothing was more likely to strengthen the republican cause and heighten the republicans' chances than the Hindenburg candidacy .

If the monarchists and militarists had asked their most bitter opponent what they should do to assure their own defeat, he could not have given them another advice than:

"Nominate Hindenburg!"

We republicans — especially the republican war veterans (young Ebert fought at the front throughout the war) are most indignant that the person of the aged field marshal, who was equally venerable to all Germans, is thus dragged into the mire of party strife.

Hindenburg's candidacy signifies not only the moral but intellectual and political declaration of the bankruptcy of the monarchists. The German answer will be a well deserved defeat of the cowardly gamblers.

JOHN S. SARGENT, PORTRAIT PAINTER, CALLED BY DEATH

Well-Known Artist Dies of Stroke in London at Age of Sixty-Nine.

By International News Service:

LONDON, April 15.—John Singer Sargent, famous portrait painter, died at his Chelsea home, here today, a few hours after suffering a stroke. He was 69 years old.

Sargent, the son of a Boston physician, became the most famous portrait painter of his day. He was born in Florence, Italy, in 1856, and was educated in Italy and France. His study as an artist was mainly under Carolus Duran and he was but 23 years old when his work was first exhibited at the salon. Since that first success, in 1879, his paintings were continually exhibited in the famous salons of the continent.

He was a member of the Royal Scottish Water Colour society and in recognition of his merit was made a royal academician in 1897. He was an officer of the French legion of honor and held honorary degrees from Oxford and Cambridge.

John Singer Sargent, R. A., one of the most distinguished of modern portrait painters, was born in Florence, Italy, in 1856, the son of a Boston, Mass., physician. He was educated in Italy and France under some of the great masters, including Carolus Duran. He exhibited in the salon in 1879 and since then continuously in the salon and academy. He became an A. R. A. in 1894.

Sargent's first triumph may have come in Paris after his return from Spain in 1879. His exhibitions in America came in 1876, 1887, 1889, 1895 and 1903.

Although Sargent won fame as a portrait painter and was the greatest artist America has produced, his mural paintings are only slightly less praised by the critics. His landscapes, too, approach those of Innes.

Trenchant Wit.

Even when Sargent was the "rage" of New York, London and Paris and a portrait from his brush was to be seen in many homes of wealth, there were many women who were afraid to sit for him. His trenchant wit, occasionally caustic, that flowed in his conversation often imparted itself to his art, and the "nouveau riches" were to him anathema.

While critics differ as to the work of Sargent's that has most merit, many are united on "Clemencita," portrait of a Spanish dancer. There is a hint of Velsaquez in this work, but the force and sweep of the characterization are distinctly Sargent's. This canvas was purchased by the French government and hangs in the Luxemburg.

Among the portraits for which Sargent is noted are those of President Roosevelt, Ellen Terry, Joseph Chamberlain, Octavia Hill, Mrs. Carl Meyer and children and Lady Faudel Phillips.

Although living for most of his life in London, Sargent was said to have valued highly his American origin.

Preston's Verses Show Cynicism of "Flaming Youth"

By United News:

CHICAGO, April 15.—As 21-year-old Robert Preston, stricken with diabetes, flung through the last mad days of dissipation which ended when he committed suicide by leaping into Lake Michigan, he poured forth his philosophy of "flaming youth" in jokes and verses written for his college publications at Northwestern university.

Preston was buried Wednesday while Chicago still discussed the extraordinary disclosures of youthful excesses revealed in the diaries he had written in his last days.

Drink, kisses, picked up girls and automobile joy rides were the themes with which Preston dealt in his contributions to the university daily student newspaper and the monthly humorous magazine.

On Feb. 18th, when his career of drinking and "petting parties" was at its height, the following verse appeared:

"She saw me beck,
"And acquiesed.
"But wouldn't neck
"So walked the rest."

A few days before, on Feb. 10th, he commented on his laundryman.

"My laundryman's a bit Chinese;
"His motto is, 'Aim to please.'
"I sent him socks and B.V.D.'s;
"He sent me back a pink chemise!"

The last cynicism expressed in Preston's diaries was also expressed in his contributions.

"Eat hearty of the ham sandwich of love," he wrote, "for it will pall when you discover that though the bread may be different, the filling is always the same."

One of Preston's last verses discussed moonshine.

"Sing a song of moonshine,
"A bottle full of death,
"Four and twenty wallops
"That take away your breath.
"When the pint was empty
"The world began to swing.
"Wasn't that a horrid trick
"To play upon the king?"

The verse had just been published when the student, after an all night drinking party, shot himself through the head as he stood on a pier at dawn and toppled into Lake Michigan.

ELLIN MACKAY DENIES ENGAGEMENT RUMOR

By United News:

NEW YORK, April 15.—Ellin MacKay, daughter of Clarence H. MacKay who arrived Wednesday on the Olympic, denied rumors that she was engaged to Irving Berlin, the song writer.

"Mr. Berlin? Oh, that is preposterous!" The heiress replied to interviewers. "There is positively not a jot of truth in it., It is really embarrassing to have to answer, but I have only met Mr. Berlin two or three times, and anything like an engagement is ridiculous."

"Well are you engaged to anyone else?" another interviewer asked.

"Indeed no," she said.

"Why not marry a poor man?" asked one of the reporters.

"Am I to consider that a proposal?" the young lady countered, and the interview ended.

WHEELER BLAMES HARRY DAUGHERTY FOR ARRAIGNMENT

Montana Senator Claims Political Foes Framed Conspiracy Charge.

By PAUL R. MALLON,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., April 15.—The sparks began to fly about the county court house today immediately upon arrival of the principal in the trial of Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, once a leading prosecutor in the Washington scandal investigations.

Escorted by a squad of attorneys, Wheeler set up headquarters in the Park hotel, and immediately authorized a statement charging his political enemies and especially Harry Daugherty, former attorney general, whom he ousted from office, with having instigated the charge upon which he will go on trial here tomorrow—a charge that he misused his senatorial office by appearing as attorney for a private client before a government department.

"Daugherty and his men are still behind the prosecution," Wheeler said. "One of the first men I saw in town was Assistant Atty. Gen. Pratt, who was first sent out by Daugherty to get me.

LaFollette Breaks Silence.

"Instead of prosecuting me, the department of justice ought to be trying a lot of people we showed up in the Daugherty investigation."

Then Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, with whom Wheeler was associated as vice-presidential candidate in the last campaign, also broke his long silence and issued through the Wheeler headquarters a statement charging the republican administration with attempting to "get" Wheeler and Sen. James R. Couzens of Michigan, investigator of the treasury department.

Sleuths at Work.

"That the Couzens committee, which is investigating the tax bureau is on a hot trail is attested by the fact that the treasury department appears to regard it as necessary to do something to make him let up," LaFollette stated.

"Evidently it is decided that Couzens must be choked off or be discredited and besmirched.

"Hence the treasury department sets its sleuths to work. In their desperation, they are forced to go back to Couzens' personal income tax record six years ago and demand additional tax payments of more than a million dollars.

"The indictment against Sen. Wheeler was procured while he was successfully conducting an investigation of Atty. Gen. Daugherty. From the beginning, he was subjected to espionage, personal villification and open and secret threats against his life.

Plot Is Hatched.

"When it was found that nothing could halt him, the plot was hatched to indict him and by hook or crook convict and ruin him.

"The department of justice, under the Coolidge administration, is still infested with Daugherty appointees who still hold on under the administration and appear to be very influential with it in its indifference to the violations of law by steel mergers, railroad mergers, packing mergers, the packers and other consent decrees and in neglecting and refusing to prosecute flagrant violations of the anti-trust law.

"It has been officially determined by the bosses that these investigations into official conduct of the government at Washington must be stopped by hook or crook."

It is the first lengthy statement upon issues that LaFollette has made since his defeat in the presidential race.

Meantime John L. Slattery, district attorney for Montana, began work on presentation of the prosecuon. All through Tuesday night he conferred with the 40 witnesses he will put on the stand.

Guillotine Claims Fritz Haarmann for 26 Murders

By United Press:

HANOVER, Germany, April 15—Fritz Haarmann, who murdered 26 youths, was executed on the guillotine at 6 a. m. today.

The most expensive cigar and the finest Brazilian coffee obtainable were the two last requests of this strange murderer, who then walked with steady footsteps to the scaffold.

"I repent," said Haarmann at the end, adding quickly, "but I do not fear death."

In accordance with the German custom, Haarmann was not informed until Tuesday evening that he was to die this morning. The newspapers were not advised.

Granted Last Request.

The murderer, whose trial was a world-wide sensation because of its revolting details, was granted a last request and told his jailers that if he could have cigars and coffee of the finest quality, he would be happy.

Haarmann confessed to luring youths to a mean hovel in a dark Hanover side street near the river, where he confined his victims and killed them by tearing their throats with his sharp teeth and drinking their blood.

Sold Clothing.

Hans Grans, who acted as procurer of Haarmann's victims, was found guilty as an accomplice. Grans and Haarmann sold the clothing of the youths.

Only a few official witnesses were present at dawn when the murderer met his death. Newspaper correspondents were excluded.

Haarmann consulted his pastor during the night.

The guillotine was used for the execution instead of the hand axe, which is customary elsewhere in Germany.

File Marble Blank by Friday Night

All Entries in Tournament Must Be Made by That Time.

FRIDAY night is the last time the application blanks for the Marble Tournament will be accepted at the office of The News-Times as the first matches will be held Saturday.

If you have not yet filled out yours, do it today and be sure that you start with the first of the tournament contests Saturday morning.

Col. C. Seymour Bullock, municipal recreation director, will be in complete charge of all the matches, and he, above all others, is fully qualified to be at the head of such a great sport movement.

Boys from all over the cities of Mishawaka nd South Bend have been enrolling, and one of them will be the fortunate victor who will take the great trip to Atlantic City.

The first two national marble kings have become keen rivals in the art of training a successor.

Handing down his marble crown is worrying George Lenox, the 1924 national champion. He is doing his best to pick a successor from his own home town of Baltimore.

Harlin McCoy, the first national marble champion, picked in 1923, is just as determined that the crown will go back to his home town of Columbus this year, and is coaching the boys there.

Tommy Wright, of Springfield, Mass., who missed the crown himself in the finals last year and was the national runner-up, is hopeful of training someone who will go him one better.

INDIANA WOMAN ADMITS KILLING THREE CHILDREN

Tells Porter County Sheriff She Poisoned Two Sons and Daughter.

By United News:

CROWN POINT, Ind., April 15.—Mrs. Anna Cunningham confessed late Wednesday night to poisoning three of her children by placing arsenic in their food.

The confession was made to Sheriff Ben Strong of Porter county who had been questioning the woman for several hours. He said she had not "told all her story" but had confessed to poisoning two of her sons and a daughter.

She talks by fits and starts. Officials have made arrangements to keep someone near her in her cell all night hoping that she will clear up the mystery of the deaths of her husband and children.

To Be Arraigned.

A warrant formally charging the woman with murder was drawn up Wednesday afternoon, specifying that she be held in jail without bail. She will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace H. H. Kempt Thursday morning.

The presence of arsenic in the body of Mrs. Cunningham's 10-year-old son Walter was the basis for the murder charge. Walter's body was exhumed together with another son, Charles, and that of the woman's husband. Dr. William D. McNally, Cook county coronor's physician, conducted the examination of the vital organs and submitted his report to officials here.

He included in the report the statement that the body of David Cunningham, 25, now in a Chicago hospital near death, is "literally saturated with arsenic." It was the fact that David's illness is similar in all ways to that of his dead father and brothers which caused the present investigation. A married sister first suspected that "something was wrong."

Find Much Arsenic.

When officials raided the Cunningham home in Gary, Ind., large quantities of arsenic were found. Mrs. Cunningham said she used the poison to fight rats, and until now has persistently denied that she poisoned her family. She admits freely that sometimes for days during her "fainting spells," now diagnosed as epileptic fits, she was unaware of what she did.

"My children would tell me about being cross, even abusing them, and I wouldn't remember a thing about it," she declared. "They would say that I even chased visitors out of the house — something. I wouldn't dream of doing if I had been myself."

Mrs. Cunningham was to have appeared before a sanity board Wednesday, but a sudden nervous collofidreeampjlbodyaMfl: ?.fiM ?awodto lapse prevented her from doing so.

TRANSMIT X-RAY PICTURE BY WIRE

Photograph of Hand, Showing Bone Structure, Is Sent by Telegraph.

By United Press:

CHICAGO, April 15.—An X-ray negative of a person's hand was sent here today by wire from New York.

The demonstration, made by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., shows that the day is at hand when an X-ray diagnosis of an injury or ailment by specialists at great distance from the patient can be made.

The picture of a left hand, showing in detail the bone structure and a ring on the third finger, was sent from the New York telephone company's offices and received at the offices of the Victor X-ray Corp. here just seven minutes later.

According to specialists, the negative was as clear and distinct as the average plate and could readily be used for diagnostic purposes.

DRINKING PARTY ENDS IN MURDER

By International News Service:

LOS ANGELES, April 15. — Mrs. Nellie McNeil calmly confessed today, according to police, that she stabbed to death George M. Stanley, also known as Stalsby, said to be a wealthy Oklahoman during a gay "drinking party" in an apartment house early today.
