Governor Enters Race — Hours After Indictment

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. announced his candidacy for a third term on Thursday, less than two hours after he and his former aide were indicted on charges of extorting $25,000 from a savings and loan firm seeking a bank charter.

A U.S. District Court grand jury returned the single one-count indictment against Moore and William H. Loy, 43, now an attorney in Romney.

The indictment charges the two with conspiring between May 1, 1972, and March 1973 to obtain $25,000 from Theodore R. Price, who was president of Diversified Mountaineer Corp.

Will Plead Innocent

Moore, 52, told reporters that he will plead innocent at his arraignment Friday. He accused U.S. Atty. John Field III, who led the investigation against him, of conducting "a vicious political vendetta ... to destroy me as a human being and hand-pick the next governor of the State of West Virginia."

He said: "I'm not yielding one inch to this inquisitor or any other ambition-fired zealot. I'm going to fight, and I'm going to ferret out and lay bare the abuses and excesses employed by this U.S. attorney's office in subverting the grand jury process."

'Truth Will Prevail'

He said he had planned to announce his candidacy next Tuesday, but decided to do so Thursday because he firmly believes "that the truth will prevail." It is believed that Moore's candidacy for a third term will be contested because of a state constitutional amendment necessitating a state Supreme Court decision.

Loy will be arraigned Monday.

"I am shocked to learn of this," Loy said Thursday night. "I know I am completely innocent and I intend to fight this charge and to clear my name for myself and for my family."

The indictment said the money was given "by the wrongful use of fear of economic harm and under color of official right, in that said money was paid by Theodore R. Price to Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. in order to obtain the approval of a pending application for a state bank charter."

Applied for Charter

The industrial saving.. and loan firm had applied for the charter with the state Board of Banking and Financial Institutions but it was never granted. The four-state empire was closed in January 1974 by banking officials in West Virginia, Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee and a bankruptcy liquidation plan was approved last month.

Price, who lives in Florida and was unavailable for comment, pleaded guilty in May to a reduced federal charge of fraud and conspiracy but has not yet been sentenced. The remaining 36 charges against him were dropped. Price had resigned in mid-1973.

Also named as unindicted co-conspirators were George B. Jordan Jr., state banking commissioner, and Nolan B. Hamric, president of the Bank of Gassaway and a member of the state Building Commission.

Court Denies Little's Plea

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Joan Little, a black woman acquitted of murder in the slaying of a white jailer, was turned down Thursday by the state supreme court in a bid to win a new trial on charges of larceny and breaking and entering.

The state supreme court offered no explanation in rejecting Miss Little's request for a new trial.

Quinlan Friend Testifies

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — William Zywot, a young man who was with Karen Quinlan in her last conscious days, testified Thursday before a state grand jury investigating the cause of her eight-month coma.

Officials said Zywot was cooperative, though, they would not report what he said.

A request by Miss Quinlan's parents for permission to let her "die with dignity" by turning off her respirator was denied by a Superior Court judge after a trial last month. They are appealing the ruling to the state Supreme Court.

Atty. Gen. William F. Hyland said the grand jury investigation concerns "what she did in the last several days before she lapsed into a coma, and whether anybody did anything improper to her that contributed to her condition."

Hyland said investogators still don't know if any crime was involved, though the investigation was prompted by the fact Miss Quinlan, 21, was bruised when she was taken to a hospital last April.

Zywot, 22, at first refused to talk to investigators.

He'll Be There Quite a While

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Joseph Kallinger, a Philadelphia shoemaker accused of conducting a three-state string of father-son crime, was sentenced Thursday to 80 years in prison on a robbery conviction.

"You're an evil man, Joseph Kallinger," Judge John C. Dowling said as he imposed sentence.

The 80-year sentence, which includes a provision under which Kallinger could be eligible for parole in 30 years, was near the maximum allowed by law.

Other Terms

Kallinger, 39, got 20 years for each of four counts of robbery. The Dauphin County judge also sentenced him to concurrent terms for burglary and other related charges.

The charges stemmed from a Dec. 3, 1974, robbery in which Kallinger and his son Michael, then 12, allegedly tied up and robbed four women at a suburban Harrisburg home. Michael has been judged a delinquent and sent to a state youth facility.

"Society needs protection," Dowling said. He called Kallinger "utterly vile and depraved" and said the crime and the involvement of Kallinger's son "stamps you as violent and dangerous."

Dowling also referred to testimony in which Kallinger was quoted as telling his victims that if they identified him, "the court system being what it is, I'll be out in no time and get you."

Judge's View

"You are wrong," Dowling said to Kallinger, and then announced the prison term.

Kallinger has also been charged with murder and other crimes in New Jersey and is fighting extradition to that state. The New Jersey crimes also allegedly involved a father-son team and included sexual assaults. Kallinger was also charged with assault in Baltimore, Md.
