Hearing on Drowning Finds No Violation Of Boat Rental Law

A small metal rowboat which sank in the Potomac River yesterday, resulting in the drowning of a 13-year-old boy, was rented by a 17-year-old youth in compliance with District law, a corporation counsel's hearing found today.

Drowned was Embrey Kitts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kitts, 3017 Dumbarton avenue N.W. He lost his life when the three-passenger boat submerged under the weight of seven teen-age boys about 30 yards from shore. The others swam safely to land. Embrey could not swim.

The hearing was ordered before George F. Lynch, assistant corporation counsel, to determine whether the boat was rented to an underage youth. The law forbids renting boats to minors under 17. Police listed only one of the seven boys being as old as 17.

Youth, 17, Rowed Boat.

The hearing brought out that the craft was hired by Joseph Collins, 17, of 3029 M street N.W. He told Mr. Lynch he was the only one who rowed the boat.

Also summoned to the hearing was Mrs. J. W. Crampton, owner of Crampton's Boat Yard, 4036 K street N.W., where the boat was rented; John P. Crampton, 19, her son, who is in charge of the dock; her daughter, Annabelle, 15, who rented the boat, and Joseph S. Cunningham, 15, of 2912 Olive avenue N.W., one of the seven boys.

Mr. Lynch said he was satisfied the boat was rented and handled by the 17-year-old boy. He warned, however, that another hearing may be held to determine the condition of the boat when harbor police raise it from the river.

Other Boys in Craft.

The other boys in the boat besides Cunningham and Collins were listed as Douglas Becraft, 15, of 1234 Twenty-ninth street N.W.; James Wilson, 13, and his brother William, 15, of 2922 M street N.W.; James Tolson, 13, of 2920 M street N.W.

George Fillmann of 603 Seventy-first street N.E. said he was walking on the river bank when he heard a voice shout, "Cut it out, fellows, I can't swim." He said he turned in time to see the boat, which was rocking sideways, sink and throw the youths into the water.

"One of the boys hollered he couldn't swim— it was the same voice I heard earlier—and two boys grabbed him and started toward shore," Mr. Fillmann said, "but they let go about 30 feet out. I saw the boy go under, come up and go under again. I was too far away to do anything."

Boys Become Panicky.

Charles H. Ward of 4611 Harling lane, Bethesda, Md., was painting his boat on the nearby shore when the accident happened. Mr. Ward, police said, saw one youth standing in the boat a short time before it sank.

Police said the survivors told them the seven boys had made two trips in the boat to a rock in the middle of the river to fish. After a short while, they said, they decided to return to shore and to make it in one trip.

The boat began to ship water and the boys became panicky, police said.

Police dragged the river for more than an hour before they recovered young Kitts' body in about 15 feet of water some 30 feet from shore.

The boy, who was a student at Gordon Junior High School, was a member of the Georgetown Branch Boys' Club's 105-pound basket ball team, which was scheduled to meet the 90-pounders at Uline Arena last night in a preliminary to the Washington Caps-Chicago Stags game. The boys' game was called off because of young Kitt's death.

In addition to his parents, the boy is survived by two brothers, Jerry, 9, and Clarence, jr., 19, and a sister, Nellie, 23.

Mr. Kitts said his son's body would be moved from the Morgue today to Chambers funeral home, Thirty-first and M streets N.W. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

WATCH SEARCH FOR DROWNED BOY—Joseph Collins looks over the side of a harbor police boat while police drag for the body of 13-year-old Embrey Kitts. Two of the other youths who swam safely to shore sit huddled under an overcoat as they wait for recovery of their young friend's body. All Laboratory Tests In Harvey Mystery Listed as Negative

All laboratory tests to determine the cause of Wynona Harvey's death have been completed and all are negative, Arlington County Coroner W. C. Welburn reported officially today.

Dr. Welburn said as far as he was concerned the 25-year-old Philippine Embassy secretary died by drowning. He has not yet decided whether the drowning involved foul play, accident or suicide.

The coroner's report leaves police virtually where they started eight days ago when the girl was found lying face down in a few inches of water in Rocky Run near the George Washington Memorial highway.

Dr. Welburn said the decision on how the girl died will depend on further investigations made by him and the police.

A conference between police, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas and Dr. Welburn to discuss the turn the case has taken is expected later today and may be followed by an announcement.

The coroner already has issued a temporary certificate stating that death was probably due to drowning and he can amend that certificate at any time but he did not indicate when he would do so. The temporary certificate was issued to release the body for burial.

No Sign of Poison.

The laboratory tests, made in Richmond by Dr. H. S. Breyfogle, Virginia's chief medical examiner, and in Alexandria by Dr. Jefferson Kernodle, State pathologist for Northern Virginia, covered microscopic as well as chemical tests. Technicians tested for a wide range of poisons, but found no indications that the girl was poisoned.

Examination of the body also failed to reveal any marks of violence or any indication that Miss Harvey was suffering from a disease which might have caused her sudden death.

Hyde Park Rites to Mark Date of Roosevelt's Death

By the Associated Press

HYDE PARK, N. Y., April 11.—The second anniversary of Franklin D. Roosevelt's death will be observed tomorrow in ceremonies from the portico of the old Roosevelt home, scene of the late President's traditional election night appearances before torchlight processions of his neighbors.

Several thousand persons, including delegations from a dozen organizations, are expected to attend. Part of the program will be broadcast over three Nation-wide networks from 4:30 to 4:45 p.m.

President Truman will broadcast from Kansas City. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, widow of the President, and former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who is president of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Foundation, will broadcast from Hyde Park.

The crowd of onlookers gathered on the lawn before the stone and stucco mansion will hear an address by Robert E. Sherwood, playwright and member of the Executive Committee of the Roosevelt Memorial Foundation, after the broadcast.

The home and grounds, including the century-old rose garden where the President is buried, were dedicated a year ago tomorrow as a national shrine under supervision of the National Park Service.

By the Associated Press

VATICAN CITY, April 11.—Gennaro Granito Cardinal Pignatelli di Belmonte, who has known five Popes, was 96 years old yesterday. The dean of cardinals arose as usual before dawn and soon was hard at work at his desk.

"The habits of a lifetime are not easily changed," he said.

The prelate said he saw no reason—"God willing"—why he should not round out 100 years. A native of Naples, he was ordained in 1879 and was elevated to the purple in 1911.

Greeks Suffer Great Hardships Because of Money Depreciation

By Constantine Brown
Star Foreign Affairs Analyst

ATHENS (By Mail).—Greek currency is shot to pieces and there is very little gold in the vaults of the Bank of Greece to support it.

Through various artifices the currency is maintained at 5,000 drachmas to the dollar, but this is only nominal. The prewar exchange was 250 drachmas to the dollar.

Actually the dollar, the pound sterling and the Swiss franc—the only hard currencies in the international markets—are quoted much higher in the black market in Greece as in all other European countries. Depreciation of the currency is due as much to the political situation as to generally unsettled economic conditions.

Life is hard in Greece, where a two-pound loaf of bread costs 50 cents and a pound of scrub apples 40 cents. Oranges, which are grown in Greece, cost $1.05 a dozen.

The basic cause for these high prices is not speculation but difficulties of transportation. Not only are the railroads in poor shape, but a lack of security on the highways makes travel more than 50 miles from a patrolled center a serious hazard.

A meal in a second-class restaurant costs about $2, while first-class establishments, patronized only by foreigners and the few remaining wealthy Greeks, are about twice as expensive.

All manufactured consumers' goods have to be imported from abroad. Italy, France and Turkey do not require payment in "healthy exchange" and the goods imported from those countries should be more reasonably priced than those from the United States, England and Switzerland. But actually they are not, because of unbelievably high import duties.

The Greek government, with an eye on its rapidly dwindling treasury, feels compelled to put almost prohibitive taxes on imports, even at the risk of depriving its people of many essentials.

In this particular case the government can hardly be blamed. It is not easy for a country the size of Greece to keep an army of 1,000,000 men constantly under arms. The Greek soldier receives about 10 cents a month. A brigadier general, who has to provide himself and his family with clothing and food, gets $90 a month. The conscripted man is better off, however, for he receives at least food, clothing, a small ration of tobacco and is housed in barracks.

The hardships are so great in this country that the people have become greatly depressed. Their only hope seems to be outside help, which they hope will last long enongh to get Greece back on its feet.

The "aid to Greece" bill now before Congress is the sole topic of discussion among the politicians, as well as among the cafe crowds which gather every day. Doubtless, too, it is being discussed in every Greek village.

The peasant servant of a friend of mine asked him a few days after President Truman made his historic statement:

"Will we have to queue up for the American dollars like we do for bread, or will there be an easier method of distribution?"

Two D. C. Policemen Instruct Justice Murphy on Legal Point

It appears that even a Supreme Court justice can be in the dark about the finer points of the District's laws.

The jurist was Associate Justice Frank Murphy and he was set straight on these matters by two traffic division policemen, Corpl. A. B. Nicholson and Pvt. R. V. Taylor.

According to the policemen, Mr. Murphy raised a point of law of whether Washington police have the right to arrest and deprive a person of his liberty if a misdemeanor has been committed. The whole thing started Wednesday night, it was said, when the driver of the car in which Justice Murphy was a passenger was arrested on a traffic charge.

The driver, Miss Louise A. Steinman, 24, of Lancaster, Pa., was charged with making a turn from Pennsylvania avenue N.W. into Fourteenth street from the wrong lane. Accompanied by Pvt. Taylor, Miss Steinman and her companion drove to Municipal Center where she posted $10 collateral.

While Miss Steinman was posting the money, Justice Murphy sat in the car and engaged Corpl. Nicholson, who was passing by, in conversation about the law. According to the policeman, who said he did not know to whom he was talking, Justice Murphy said:

"Is it the usual procedure here to arrest and deprive of their liberty a person charged with a misdemeanor? I have presided in some jurisdictions where this isn't so."

The policeman explained to Justice Murphy that Miss Steinman was required to post collateral, instead of being given a ticket for a later court appearance, because she lived outside the District. The discussion was extremely friendly and amiable, he said today.

Yesterday Justice Murphy happened to stroll by the Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street intersection and saw his new acquaintance of the previous evening, Pvt. Taylor. Passers-by said the discussion lasted about 10 minutes, with Justice Murphy waving his arms at intervals as he expressed the view that the District's stand on the legal point was all wet.

Afterwards Justice Murphy told reporters the discussion "was nothing but a friendly talk about what's the practice here."

Pvt. Taylor maintained a judicial silence.

Bills Authorize Aid For Park Systems

Washington's park system and the parks of nearby Maryland and Virginia would receive additional Federal aid under companion bills just introduced in the Senate and House.

The bills would authorize the Interior Department, through its National Park Service, to pay up to 50 per cent of the cost of State park projects as well as those of the District, Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Eighty per cent of the money appropriated under the bill would be paid on the basis of population, while 20 per cent would be allotted on the basis of area.

The bills were introduced by Senator Pepper, Democrat, of Florida, and Representative Peterson, Democrat, of Florida. They have been referred to the Public Lands Committees of both branches.

Whatever agency is empowered to administer State park laws would spend the money. In the case of the District, this would be the office of National Capital Parks.

If the bill is enacted, aid for parks in the Washington area would be in addition to that already given under the Capper-Cramton Act.

In the case of the District, however, this act authorizes advances of money, not outright grants in aid. The money which the District has received is paid back without interest at a fixed annual rate.

Father McManus Advises Teachers to Join Union

By the Associated Press

BOSTON, April 11.—Public school teachers were advised yesterday by a leading Catholic educator to join a "bona fide free trade union."

The Rev. William E. McManus of Washington, D. C., coupled this advice with an attack on the National Educational Association for "anti-social and anti-Democratic policies.

He told the 44th convention of the National Catholic Educational Association that even though teachers were underpaid and school children in many States were being "deprived of decent educational opportunities" the NEA was "blocking Federal aid to education."

Denouncing the NEA for refusing to support an amended Taft bill providing Federal grants to help non-public schools as well as public schools, Father McManus said:

"The NEA wants all the funds or nothing."

The association's panel on juvenile delinquincy heard Edward A. Tamm, assistant FBI director, blame the indifference of adults and the fact that "the world has lost its sense of sin" for the rising crime rate.

U. S. Urged to Pay Half Of Upkeep for Zoo

E. L. Merzereau, of the North Randle Community Citizens' Association, yesterday was quoted incorrectly in The Star as urging that the Federal Government pay the cost of the Botanic Gardens.

The Federal Government now pays for the cost of the gardens. What Mr. Merzereau said was that the Government should pay half of the upkeep of the National Zoological Park, which now is supported by District funds.

Prettyman Sees Need Of Craftsmanship In Legal Profession

A need for craftsmanship in the legal profession is seen by Associate Justice E. Barrett Prettyman of the United States Court of Appeals as one of the problems of administrative law.

Justice Prettyman addressed the annual dinner meeting of the administrative law section of the District Bar Association last night at the Statler Hotel. The dinner honored heads of the Federal administrative departments and agencies.

Describing "our profession as a whole" as "woefully deficient in craftsmanship," the justice declared:

"I truly believe that if we as lawyers learned how to do most efficiently the things we do, whether it is to write a contract, construct a bond issue, draw a will, examine a witness, write a brief or make an argument, the administration of justice would achieve a major advance in this country—perhaps even the critical advance necessary to the preservation of our system."

Preston B. Kavanagh, chairman of the section, presided at the dinner. Guests of honor were:

Paul M. Herzog, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board; J. M. Johnson, director of the Office of Defense Transportation; W. R. Johnson, commissioner of customs; Bernard R. Kennedy, director of the Federal Register; William R. McComb, administrator of the wage and hour division of the Labor Department.

Also, Robert K. McConnaughey, commissioner of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Nelson Lee Smith, chairman of the Federal Power Commission; William S. Tyson, solicitor of the Labor Department, and Austin F. Canfield, president of the District Bar Association.

Philadelphia Takes Steps To Avoid 'Collyer Incident'

By the Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—An 82-year-old spinster has been removed from her rubbish-littered Philadelphia home by court order because city officials say they want no part of a "Collyer incident here."

They had reference to the two New York recluses, Langley and Homer Collyer, whose bodies were found in the Harlem house where they lived alone for decades.

Magistrate Jacob Dogole, after a hearing held in the ramshackle house where Miss Anna Quinn has lived alone for approximately 25 years, ordered her committed to Philadelphia General Hospital until a guardian can be named for her.

Herbert M. Packer, chief of the Bureau of Housing and Sanitation, told the magistrate she should not be allowed to continue to remain in a house with its windows smashed and doors broken.

The woman apparently had only a $28 monthly relief check for support—and often that was stolen from her, it was testified.

Mansfield, Oldest Member Of Congress, Gravely Ill

Representative Joseph Jefferson Mansfield, Democrat, of Texas, at 86 the oldest man in Congress, reported in grave condition today at Bethesda Naval Hospital, where he is suffering from a "circulatory failure."

Taken to the medical center Wednesday night, Mr. Mansfield was placed under an oxygen tent yesterday. He had been ill for a few days, but was at the Capitol at the beginning of the week.

At his bedside yesterday were a son and daughter, Bruce Mansfield of Washington and Mrs. R. P. Dorsey of Baltimore. Another daughter, Mrs. Frank Schmidt, lives in Kingsbury, Tex.

Mr. Mansfield, who lives at 2101 New Hampshire avenue N.W., entered Congress March 4, 1917. He is one of the few persons still living whose grandfathers fought in the American Revolution. His father was born in 1807 and was killed as a Confederate soldier.

69-Year-Old Woman to Die Today for Second Murder

By the Associated Press

SAN QUENTIN, Calif., April 11.—Mrs. Louise Peete Judson, 69, convicted of two murders but still protesting her innocence, goes to her death in the San Quentin gas chamber today—the second woman ever executed by California.

Louise Judson.

Her last hope of escaping execution was dashed yesterday when the United States Supreme Court again refused to rehear her case, and Gov. Earl Warren denied clemency.

First woman executed in California was Mrs. Juanita "The Duchess" Spinelli, who died in 1941 for a gang slaying near Sacramenta.

Mrs. Judson first was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Jacob C. Denton, a Lot Angeles engineer, in 1920. She was paroled, after serving 18 years of the sentence, to Mrs. Margaret Logan of Pacific Palisades, Calif.

It was Mrs. Logan's death three years ago that brought her to the green-painted death chamber.

"I am not guilty," Mrs. Judson told newsmen late yesterday on her arrival from the women's prison at Tehachapi.

"I did not kill Denton or Mrs. Logan," she declared during a brief interview, with Warden Clinton Duffy present. "I signed Mrs. Logan's name, yes. I committed forgery. But that is all——"

Her voice broke, her face was white and taut. Mrs. Judson was tired and nervous and tearful as she entered the prison to prepare for death.

She was spared the sight of the gas chamber as she was led to her tiny cell in death row. For her benefit, the chamber was covered by a canvas screen.

5 British Husbands Press Appeal for Russian Wives

By the Associated Press

LONDON, April 11.—Five forlorn British husbands hoisted a Russian-language farewell banner at Northolt Airport today, hoping it would impress a departing Soviet delegation with the urgency of their appeals for reunion with their Russian wives.

The delegation of 20 members of the Russian Supreme Soviet made no promises, one of its leaders explaining that the only information it had about the Russian wives had been obtained from British sources.

The wives—there are 15—are unable to obtain Russian exit visas. Their British husbands are unable to go to Russia to join them. The British government has appealed to the Soviet government to lift the exit permit restrictions.
