Just Call Him 'Mr. Cool'

LOS ANGELES — Dog sporting straw hat, dark glasses and a cigar visits Hollywood Blvd. near Mann's Chinese Theater in Los Angeles Tuesday. Leonard Massaro who says the dog likes to follow him around will only answer to the name "Mr. Cool."

Magazine Publisher Enters Guilty Plea

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — Screw magazine publisher Al Goldstein, the subject of two federal obscenity trials in Kansas, Wednesday pleaded guilty to obscenity charges filed only against his company — Milky Way Productions Inc. — and paid a $30,000 fine.

In accepting the guilty plea, the federal government agreed to drop personal charges against Goldstein and former associate James Buckley, thus bringing to an end government prosecution of the much-publicized case that began more than three years ago.

Judge Frank Theis of Wichita ordered Milky Way Productions to pay $30,000 — $5,000 on one count of conspiracy and $5,000 on each of five counts of mailing obscene material into Kansas.

Drop All Charges

U.S. Attorney Ben Burgess said he would drop all charges against Goldstein and Buckley upon payment of the fine in full. Goldstein, whose first Wichita, Kan., trial resulted in an overturned conviction and the second in a hung jury, said he was prepared to pay the fine immediately.

Accompanied by police and his attorneys, Goldstein arrived at the courthouse Wednesday wearing a bulletproof vest and entered the building through a back entrance.

Visited Flynt

Tuesday Goldstein had visited Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt in Atlanta. Flynt was shot two weeks ago outside a Lawrenceville, Ga., courthouse where he also had been undergoing an obscenity trial.

"Damn right, I fear for my life," Goldstein told reporters after the sentencing.

The publisher said despite his defense costing him thousands of dollars, "it is a tremendous victory."

"I am a survivor and Screw is a survivor. We have won, Screw will continue."

Arsenic Poisoning

Woman, Held in Murder, Suspected in 3 Others

By Elissa McCrary
Associated Press Writer

LUMBERTON, N.C. — A woman charged in the arsenic-poisoning death of a farmer who reportedly planned to marry her is also under investigation in the deaths of her mother and of two people for whom she did housekeeping, the sheriff says.

"She was just helping out with the housework and cleaning when the people got sick and died," Robeson County Sheriff Malcolm McLeod said of Velma Margie Barfield, 45, who moved less than a year ago from nearby Parkton to this close-knit community of 25,000.

Mrs. Barfield, who has been twice widowed since 1969, was charged with murder Tuesday in the death of Stuart Taylor, 53, a farmer who lived in nearby St. Pauls.

Mother Died in 1974

McLeod said Mrs. Barfield's mother died in 1974. He would not reveal the identities of the other two, who reportedly died last year.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Barfield was taken to Raleigh for psychiatric tests at Dorothea Dix Hospital. A friend who visited her in jail on Tuesday quoted Mrs. Barfield as telling her: "I can't help myself. I'm sick."

Friends of Taylor described him as a "a fine, upstanding neighbor." They said Mrs. Barfield had been living with him for several months and the couple planned to marry.

Dilapidated House

Taylor became ill Feb. 2 and was treated and released at Southeastern General Hospital in Lumberton. He returned the next day and died before his ailment could be diagnosed. An autopsy revealed arsenic in his liver.

Mrs. Barfield's own residence was a small, dilapidated frame house in a run-down section of Lumberton. Neighbors said they saw little of her.

Authorities Note Safeguards

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The FBI and airport officials were almost certain that the man who hijacked an airliner over San Francisco Bay this week did not have a bomb — but they say they had no choice but to treat the incident as if he did.

The FBI ascertained that the hijacker cleared the X-ray checkpoint at San Francisco International Airport with his bag before boarding United Airlines Flight 696 to Seattle.

Harry Murphy, director of security of the Airline Transport Association of scheduled air carriers, said a bomb would have shown up in the X-ray. The hijacker took over the plane about 10 minutes after takeoff.

The plane was forced to fly to Oakland where 68 passengers and four flight attendants from the seven-member flight crew were allowed off. It took off for Denver, where the cockpit crew jumped out of the plane and then the hijacker surrendered.

PLAN YOUR LIFE WITH CONFIDENCE

FORECAST YOUR GOOD AND BAD DAYS IN SECONDS WITH

BIORHYTHM

It is our newest scientific discipline, the computerized study of biological clocks, built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior. It does not predict the future. It does forecast when you will be at your best and worst and helps you to deal with what life has in store for you.

FREE SEMINAR FREE

Everything you need is at the "Biorhythm and You" Seminar, sponsored by CSS, at the Hilton Hotel, Downtown Salt Lake, on March 21st at 7:30 p.m., Harvest Room. There will be experts, from all over the United States, who will demonstrate and explain the natural cycles of biorhythms to you. We will show you why almost all the major airlines now use biorhythms, and why nearly every professional NFL football team uses biorhythmic calculators to chart all their players. All this and much more will be discussed at the "Biorhythm and You" Seminar. You must sign up to attend!
